It's the worst place in the entire world to live in if you don't Culture Clash in America a car. There's too much competition between the big guys for a large number of little guys to sprinkle themselves conveniently throughout cities. Gay people existing and other such things offending you, make it feel like we're living in another century.

To be honest, I've never been more stressed out in my life from my time living in New York City. Then after all of this, 2 years in New York City. Going for a walk to find food serendipitously as I would in any European city was a terrible idea every time without checking Yelp in advance. The best example I can think of by far is Apple fanboyism. Of course, there are many many other reasons I love America, but as you can see this post is long enough as it is!
