Comprehensive soldier fitness, battlemind, and the stress continuum model: Because of the warrior ethos and training, high-threat experiences are not likely to elicit the kinds of peri-event responses that define life-threat trauma in other contexts, namely intense fearhelplessness or horror. This mind-set has increased the stigma associated with being damaged by the stress of military service, and erected barriers of shame and denial between injury and care [40]. TrajectoriesofPTSDsymptomsamongsexualassaultsurvivors. Moreover, th Resilience promotion and prevention efforts need to consider different mechanisms of change, targets and intervention strategies. Without the orange stress injury zone between normal and disordered responses, there would be no way to assess service members that may need help to bounce.
