Motives and expectations In all these activities, we need to get beyond the thought that anything other than direct evangelism is a waste of time. Zeno taught that life is filled with good and bad. One further question remains to be asked: We are not simply writing fresh data on the blank hard drives of their minds; we are writing on the hard drives of their hearts. It answers these critical questions: Shifting Epistemology The word postmodern and its cognates have come to mean slightly different things to different groups of people, and in particular to mean different things in different countries. We simply have to care, or nothing will happen in the way of effective evangelism.
